EXECUTIVE PROTECTION

PROTECTING EXECUTIVES WORLDWIDE

CORPORATE AND GOVERNMENT EXECUTIVES face threats everywhere: when traveling, at special events, on the campaign trail, even at home and going to and from the workplace.

AT-RISK International can help executives assess, predict, avoid and mitigate threats, and protect executives during their day-to-day lives anywhere in the world.

That protection is based on a holistic approach designed to anticipate, identify and reduce threats, using strategic planning and field-proven tactics to proactively protect high-profile individuals from threats all over the world. The most critical component: we evaluate potential security risks and dynamically adjust our services as needed. For example, traveling to an event, appearing at that event, leaving the event to return to the office, and then traveling from the office to home might require four different protection strategies.

SERVICES

Advance Planning

The best incident is the one that never occurs. Proper advance planning and early warnings—including assessments of countries, venues and events—can help anticipate and avoid incidents before they occur.

Our advance reconnaissance team can provide detailed, comprehensive reviews and strategies for trips and events, from which route to drive to which elevator to use. The result: proactive action that decreases vulnerability.

Our security personnel, who have served all over the world, can both avoid trouble and get an executive out of trouble.

Personal Protection Specialists

Day-to-day protective security does not mean a 24/7 bodyguard. It means a Personal Protection Specialist, who can anticipate and avoid threats before they occur, to reduce liability. AT-RISK's highly trained specialists can help to get you out of trouble, and more importantly, they can keep you out of harm's way through advance planning and specialized skills. Protective coverage can be incident- or travel-based, applied during peak periods of concern, and/or on a 24/7 basis, depending on the risk. Most importantly, we offer discreet, professional protection that is visible when it needs to be, in the background when it does not, and balances your need for privacy and vulnerability.

Special Events and Political Campaign Security

Speeches, campaigning, board meetings and other events are especially vulnerable, because often an executive's schedule is publicly known in advance. AT-RISK can help protect executives, candidates, entertainers and others in the public eye when they are most at risk. Our approach analyzes and investigates potential security risks at a venue or event before they occur, and proactively mitigates threats, while helping to ensure the ability to respond to an incident.

Risk Assessments

AT-RISK can provide up-to-date, thorough risk assessments for a country, a region, a state, a city or a specific location. Based on our “boots on the ground” operatives, as well as assessment specialists, we can provide travel advisories and other valuable insights before a trip to virtually anywhere. Assessments include:

- > Crime and safety situation analysis
- > Political violence and terrorism
- > Regional terrorism, civil unrest and other local/regional issues
- > Location-specific security matters
- > Travel concerns
- > Kidnappings, arrests and other incidents
- > Critical cultural issues
- > Insurance information
- > Incident avoidance
- > Emergency contacts

Protective Intelligence Program

AT-RISK’s Protective Intelligence Program (PIP) brings together technology and threat assessment specialists to provide deep, ongoing intelligence about risks to individuals and organizations. We gather intelligence from a variety of public and private sources to mitigate threats before they are presented, allowing security teams to help predict and anticipate risk levels. With PIP, executives receive regular, comprehensive reports about risks of all types from individuals and organizations.

EXAMPLES

AT-RISK In Action

Threats to your organization’s personnel and reputation can come from anywhere in the world. Here is how AT-RISK can help uncover, assess and mitigate that risk.

- > A high-profile organization faced significant negative press over political issues, which resulted in an increased number of threats. Our PIP program collected intelligence that included proposed protests and other events. We provided this information to the client to assist in planning the logistics of an upcoming press campaign.
- > A corporate executive had attracted unwanted attention and was approached by a person of interest. Our team provided a behavioral assessment, determining information about the subject’s daily activities and frequented locations. We also evaluated the presence of behaviors suggesting an interest in violent actions. The security director and protective team used this information to plan countermeasures while traveling to various cities across the nation.
