Community-Based Threat Assessment is a strategic approach that brings together stakeholders from law enforcement, healthcare, education, retail, and places of worship to collaboratively identify and mitigate potential threats within their community.

AT-RISK International offers comprehensive training in community-based behavioral threat assessment, covering foundational principles, team building for threat assessment teams, management strategies, and advanced investigation techniques.

"The Community-Based Behavioral Threat Assessment and Management Training provided by AT-RISK International has been a key factor for pulling in all necessary stakeholders to operate an effective county-wide threat assessment team. The benefits have already been noticeable when collaborating with non-law enforcement organizations for triage and management of potential threats."
